DAY 3

In line with the Arab Fashion Council's vision for an eco-sustainable future, the Italian luxury brand, Cangiari presented a transitive and progressive collection. Known for being the first eco-ethical fashion brand, Cangiari stood out for its hand-loom fabrics of ancient Calabrian weaving. Together with research and innovation, Cangiari creates organic yarns that respect the ecosystem. The collection showcased earthy elements of charcoal blacks and vintage reds with accessorised pebble stones. A gallant-tone palette made an elegant statement of sustainable fashion.

JAMAL TASLAQ

Taslaq kicked off the evening with an exuberant soft-toned palette collection with a salute to the Grecian Goddess. Distinctive bridal white, off-whites and shades of baby pink with sheer lace perfected the silhouettes with grace and beauty. Hints of metallic shone on the runway, keeping the mood subtle, yet empowering the collection.

HUAWEI FASHIONLOGY in collaboration with J BY JORDY FU

J by Jordy Fu brought another exceptional and futuristic collection to the runway, keeping a natural earthy palette, featuring segmented architectural pieces.

KACEM SAHL + ROCCO BARROCCO

Intricacy with sequins and delicate embroidery, reflecting a midnight summer inspiration, introduced Sahl's fairytale collection. The audience was taken to a winter garden – the bold palette sparked the imagination. Supporting Sahl's exquisite designs, Rocco Barocco's collection brought a refined luxury to the runway. Magnificent lacing and majestic fabrics transformed the stage with striking brilliance.

DANY ATRACHE

Atrache closed day 3 of AFW with an absolutely ravishing collection, inspired by floral aesthetics. Featuring rustic ornate elements, the collection provided deeper insight into fabrics, detailing and concepts.
